Being part of a union means you never stand alone. When you join your local union, you become part of a larger union organization. Your local is part of AFT-NH, a federation of 26 local unions representing teachers, paraeducators, school support staff, public employees, and university educators across New Hampshire. AFT-NH provides professional support to our locals with bargaining contracts, grievances, and member representation. We advocate for our members and the communities they serve on the local, state, and national levels. We use our voices and strength to improve wages, benefits, workplace health and safety, job training, and other work-related issues.

AFT-NH was chartered on June 1, 1975, when the New Hampshire Legislature granted public employees collective bargaining rights under RSA 273-A. Until the early 1990s, AFT-NH serviced New Hampshire locals, and then it expanded to serve Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, becoming known as the Northern New England Council. On April 27, 1997, AFT-NH reactivated the original charter and returned to representing only employees in New Hampshire.

AFT-NH is governed by a constitution adopted by its members at biennial conventions. The state federation is under the leadership of a full-time President, a Vice President, a Secretary, a Treasurer, and an At-Large Representative. The AFT-NH governance structure includes a Board of Directors, which has equal representation from each local in the State.

Nationally, AFT-NH is the state affiliate of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT). AFT, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO), was founded in 1916 and today represents more than 1.8 million members. AFL-CIO is the largest federation of unions in the United States, representing nearly 15 million working people.

You are a member of AFT-NH, AFT, AFL-CIO, and NH-AFL-CIO.

This is what solidarity is about: strength in numbers. Together, let's fight for a better future.

Know Your Rights in the Workplace

History has informed us that there is no “advantage” for an employee to go in alone to meet with a supervisor to discuss a concern, complaint, disciplinary matter, or adverse observation or evaluation. By having a union representative present at any such meetings for support is essential. Often times these initial meetings will determine the trajectory of how a matter will be handled and the die will be cast for the final outcome. In the current climate, our members are being subjected to a variety of inquiries more than ever which can impact their career.

The union representative will be present as a witness, provide guidance, and as reminder to management there are protocols to follow. We strongly encourage you to have a union representative present in any such meetings.

Please make sure you know who your building representative or steward is so you are prepared to ask for assistance for yourself or another colleague should the situation arise.

In 1975, the United States Supreme Court in N.L.R.B vs. Weingarten, Inc. held that unionized employees have the right to have a union representative present during an investigatory interview. An investigatory interview occurs when a supervisor questions an employee to obtain information, which in the reasonable belief of the employee could be used as a basis for discipline.

It is the employee’s responsibility to request union representation. Once an employee requests union representation, management has three options:

- 1) Stop the questioning until a union representative arrives; or
- 2) Terminate the interview; or
- 3) Tell the employee it will terminate the interview unless the employee voluntarily waives his/her right to representation. (The Union would strongly advise employees to never waive this right.)

The Supreme Court also stated that union representatives who attend these meetings have a right to meet with the employee first and assist the employee during the process. The union representative also has a right to know the subject of the interrogation. While the interview is in progress, the representative cannot answer for the employee but may offer advice to the employee. The representative may also politely interrupt to clarify confusing or misleading questions. It is important to note that if the supervisor fails to honor your rights as an employee, proceed as directed by your supervisor to avoid being charged with insubordination; you can grieve this after the fact. If an employee is put into the position described above, he/she should say the following to the supervisor:

Weingarten Rights

“If this discussion could in anyway lead to my being disciplined or terminated, or affect my personal working conditions, I request that my union representative be present at the meeting. Without representation, I choose not to answer any questions.”
